The young lady across the way says she sometimes runs pretty short of spending money but she always tries to keep at least a little on hand and not let her purse become absolutely pictureless.

The Graduate
Entering the World

As the members of a college or high school graduating class line up on the platform, it is a hard guess to tell which will be the big business and professional successes of ten years hence. Even the professors who know the young people thoroughly, are often mystified.

In a good many cases a certain degree of business success is secured at the start through personal "pull." Many young men have fathers or uncles or brothers in large concerns. A handsome desk and comfortable salary is assigned the fledgeling of the family as soon as he acquires his degree. He may become a faithful and methodical worker. But he is rarely the one who pushes his concern into bigger fields.

The success attained by many comparatively obscure fellows is a wonder both to their teachers and associates. They may have had no social graces and no facility in book work. But somewhere back in their make up was a certain bull dog tenacity that knows not the word "fail." They hang on and hang on, until the gates of opportunity open, weary of their Important striving.

Many young men without family influence are sure of good results from the start, by a certain innate personal winsomeness. They greet the world with frank enthusiasm, and make friends every day of their lives. People like to have them around and do business with them. Their only danger lies in their too great facility. Sometimes the prizes come so easily that they forget to work. Then the tortoise soon overtakes the hare. Graduates of college and high schools do not usually have to wait long for a job. There is always something ready for a bright young fellow with willing hands. But to find an opening that offers any chance of advancement is no easy matter. Young men should not grab too eagerly for lines of work in which there is no call for individual judgment and initiative. There is too much haste for four o'clock jobs where the young man gets the afternoon off for society and games.

The balance of trade in favor of the United States during the week ended June 26, last, was $9,048,556.

GOOD LOOKING AND INEXPENSIVE.

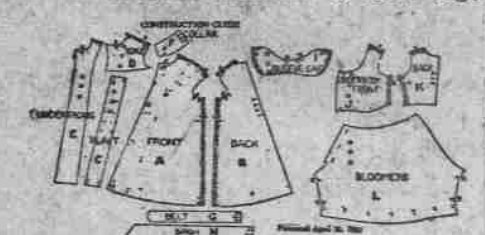

A modest bathing suit that appeals to the conservative woman because of its simplicity.

One does not always take kindly to the new bathing suits arrayed for fashionable selection, but here is a model that is practical and very stylish. It is carried out in blue alpaca of good quality, trimmed with polka dotted silk. The waist and skirt are cut in one, and the neck can be finished with a collar or perfectly plain, as preferred. In average size the model requires 1/2 yard 66-inch lining for underbody front and back, 1/2 yard 44-inch alpaca and 1/2 yard 36-inch silk for the belt.

Begin putting the suit together by taking up a dart in the front, at the shoulder, following perforations. Turn under edges of pleat on slot perforations and adjust on front (single large "O" perforation indicates upper front edge of pleat), edge having large "O" perforation along line of double "oo" perforations in front, lower edge having single "o" inch from folded edges, leaving opening between small "oo" perforations to pass belt through. Adjust yoke to position on front, corresponding to edge even. Adjust underbody edges even. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Face collar and sew to neck edge.

as notched. Turn hem at lower edges of dress on single small "p" perforations. If desired closing on left shoulder and under the arm and the front of dress cut on a fold of material; see cutting directions. Finish left shoulder edge for closing and left under-arm seam above double "oo" perforations. The line of large "O" perforations in the sleeve cap indicate the front. Lap upper front edge on back edge, matching single large and small "o" perforations and tack. Sew in armhole edge above double "oo" perforations. The sleeve cap indicate the front. Lap upper front edge on back edge, matching single large and small "o" perforations and tack. Sew in armhole edge above double "oo" perforations.

Make the underbody so as to have it ready for the bloomers. Close leg seam of bloomers as notched. Underbody lower edge to upper crosstie of small "o" perforations; stitch on perforations, insert elastic. Turn under extension at right front edge on slot perforations; center even, easing any fullness. Adjust 2-inch belting underneath underbody, stitching lower edge along seams joining bloomers and leaving upper edge free.

Sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust and 14 to 26 yards. Price, 15 cents.

TODAY'S POEM

TO AN ORIOLE

How falls it, oriole, thou has come to fly
In tropic splendor through our northern sky?

At some glad moment was it nature's choice,
To govern a scrap of sunset with a voice?

Or did some orange tulip, flaked with black,
In some forgotten garden, ages back,

Yearning toward Heaven until its wish
Was heard,
Desire unspeakably to be a bird?

—Edgar Fawcett.

The Sunday school picnic is never a complete success unless the supply of ice cream is sufficient for all the kiddies to get sick on.

The large number of public speakers roaming about the country suggests that a lot of people have read the newspaper item stating that Mr. Bryan can make $150,000 a year by lecturing.

Another purpose for which that college commencement gown is very serviceable is to use as a duster on a long motor trip.

The fact that there are 5,924,056 unmarried women in the United States is more likely to prove a shortage in the quality of men rather than in the quantity.

WOMEN WHO ARE ALL SHOW.

"A winning wave, deserving note, in the tempestuous petticoat. A careless shoeatching, in whose tile I see a mild civility. Do more betwixt me than when art is too precise in every part."

Men who find married life disappointing nearly always throw the blame on the wife. Such men are wont to say: "Had I but known the kind of wife she would make, I would have held aloof and let some other fellow marry her, repenting later. It's a man's own fault if he cannot judge fairly well what sort of a woman the sweetheart whom he has been courting for upward of a year will develop into. The quiet, thrifty young man who is very chary of spending his hard-earned money for clothes, content to look plain and neat, certainly realizes that he has an extravagant sweetheart if the girl shows up a new hat or gown almost every time he takes her out. Knowing her circumstances, that her folks are poor and have their own troubles in skimping to make both ends meet, he should not need outside advice to warn him that the pretty girl who puts every cent she can scrape up into finery for her personal adornment, while the family has scarcely enough unbroken china to set the table, lives only for show.

When she weds she will employ the same tactics. She will have gilt chairs for the parlor, rickety the limb and life of the library, and she will sit down upon them, simply because gold furniture makes such an excellent show. She'll have a chicken for dinner nights until every member of the family is ashamed to look at her in the face, because, while doing her marketing she is sure to meet all her neighbors. It makes a show before them to order fowl while they are economically purchasing a loaf of bread. There are no heights to which the ambition of the extravagant wife may not soar in her determination to make a show, unless curbed gently, but delicately. If her husband and symphony cannot be inculcated in a girl before marriage, he is foolish to hope for it afterward. Show will always come first; peace, comfort and happiness are after considerations. If they can be wedged in, well and good; if not, she gets along without them. Show becomes so much of a habit with social climbers that it sweeps aside judgment, love, kindness and sympathy for even those who need her aid in saving.

The children of such a mother cannot be blamed for getting the impression that all things are show. A woman's beauty, love and fidelity; that honor and truth are only names, bubbles a breath may blow away.

A man may well flee in terror from the vain girl who is placed side by side with the world to be. Young girls do not need costly raiment, changing with every whim of fashion's wheel, to enhance their charms. The plainer the maiden the more attractive she is to the majority of young, marriageable men. They show their wisdom in selecting such a one for a wife.

He who goes through love's garden and does not come away with a rose, is a failure. A rose that has been plucked from a bush, a straw shows which way the wind blows. Girls who are all show blossom in the breeze of the world which reads: "Beware, take care!" A man who wedded a girl who had the "make-show" habit to the extent that it was fully a craze with her, had an experience which illustrates the folly to which it may lead. His wages were modest, but by denying himself everything that he could absolutely do without he managed to save enough to buy the housekeeping outfit for a small flat to which he had planned to take his bride. To his dismay, he discovered in going over the terms that a tablecloth for the pretty dining table had been overlooked. He will furnish that, promised the mother, remembering a handsome hand-embroidered cloth she had worked with her own hands for her own wedding, and which was her choicest treasure.

Accordingly the handsome linen table spread was duly beribboned, boxed and dispatched to the bride-to-be. Less than a week later the girl who was all show, mer her future mother-in-law on the street. The elder woman beheld her gown in a sumptuous creation of fine linen and hand wrought embroidery and lace. "That is the tablecloth," laughed the girl, anticipating the other's question. "It was really a shame to use it as a tablecloth. I have made it a stunning dress out of it, haven't I?"

MISS LIBBY'S REPLIES TO YOUR LETTERS

Correct name and address must be given to insure attention, not to print. Use ink. Write short letters, on one side of paper only. Address Miss Libbey, 916 President street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

LOVE CHANGES A MAN

Dear Miss Libbey:— I am a young man possessed of means, also the wanderlust habit. Seems as if I would never be satisfied to settle down. Recently I met a young lady who seemed to me strongly, but I am restless to move on. I am able to support her. Should I propose or pass the jewel by for some more fortunate fellow?

C. DeC.
There's nothing like marriage to anchor a man to one place. While single, a man man indulges the wanderlust habit to his heart's content and as long as his funds last. It is quite another matter if he has an increasing and growing family; pulling up stakes and departing for scenes new would be such a stupendous undertaking that he would have quite enough of it after two or three experiences. He would be willing to settle with his family almost any place. The wanderlust habit will take wings when love comes to a man.

WHAT SHALL HE WRITE HER

Dear Miss Libbey:— I am a young man of age. I wrote a card to a young lady which she answered promptly. I am at a loss as to how I should begin corresponding with her. What subjects to introduce and how to treat them. A hint on this from you would be greatly appreciated.

N. C.
It is well nigh impossible to suggest subjects in this case. A letter which one should write appreciate another might think careless, cold and unworthy of a reply. Write what is uppermost in your thoughts. Show her that you are interested in her without drifting into love-making by letter. Always answer promptly.

I rote the following the following come about ships to-day:

SHIPS

There is row botes and steem ships And ships of uthir sizes, But no mattir how big or small it is, Wen a ship upsets it capsize.

A camel is the ship of the desert, It wawks awl day awn sand, It can go 7 days without watter, But eny ship cood, awn land.

Id like to go up in a airship, And make peepil rubbir and stare, If thars was enything at awl undirneath them, Exsept about 10 miles of air.

The most convenient ships is the pa-pir wuns, Like the wuns you float down the guttir, Because you can call them enything, Frum a saie ship to a revenue cattir.

And if wun upsets wile its goins, And sinks in half a minit, Unless maybe sun germs was in it.

Herry for the days of pirate ships Wen they made you wawk thare planks, O pirate ships is past and gone, Wich awt to cause mutch thanks.

A steem bote is the widest ship, And no mattir wat you do, It woud be pritty hard to upset wun, But be carefull in a canoe.

Two Different Effects.

The quality of food is very largely determined by the ingredients in the baking powder with which it is made. Cream of tartar baking powders, such as Royal, add only healthful qualities to the food.

The cream of tartar of Royal Baking Powder as used in food has the same wholesome effect on the digestive system as the cream of tartar in grapes, from which it is derived.

On the other hand, it is in evidence that objectionable mineral residues exist in food made with alum or phosphate baking powders.

There is a clause on baking powder labels which names all the ingredients. Read it and let it guide you.

CORNER FOR COOKS

Nut Chocolate Squares

Melt two squares of unsweetened chocolate over boiling water, add one-half cup of melted butter and one cup of brown sugar, and beat thoroughly. Stir in the beaten yolks of two eggs, flavor with one teaspoon of vanilla and one-half teaspoon of lemon, add one-half cup of flour, and finally fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a shallow pan filled with oiled paper, sprinkle with chopped nuts, bake in a moderate oven and cut in squares when cold.

Waffles

Mix and sift one and three-fourths cups of flour, three teaspoons of baking powder and one-half teaspoon of salt. Add one cup of milk (gradually), yolks of two eggs, one tablespoon of melted butter and the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Cook on greased hot waffle irons.

Cucumber Salad.

To make this salad a success mix five tablespoons of sour cream, two tablespoons of vinegar, one-half teaspoonful of paprika, a pinch of salt and one-half a teaspoonful of finely chopped chives. Blend all carefully and add to the cucumbers, cut into very thin slices. Mix well and serve.

Banana Cream Pie

Beat four eggs (preserving whites of two) with half-cup of sugar until thoroughly mixed, then add a tiny pinch of salt and the pulp of two very ripe bananas pressed through a
